RCPET's Institute of Management Research and Development, Shirpur

Director's Message:

The coronavirus pandemic has led to extraordinary panic across the world. With no vaccine instantly available, the concern over the deadly virus increases with every passing day. It has taken a toll on people's mental health what with schools, colleges, playgrounds, malls, theatres and almost every other public space sealed for the public.

It is easy to get demotivated with the current global crisis which leads to stress and nervousness. But hope should not be lost. Keeping each other, family and friends positive during painful times is imperative even when it is understandable to panic at this time.

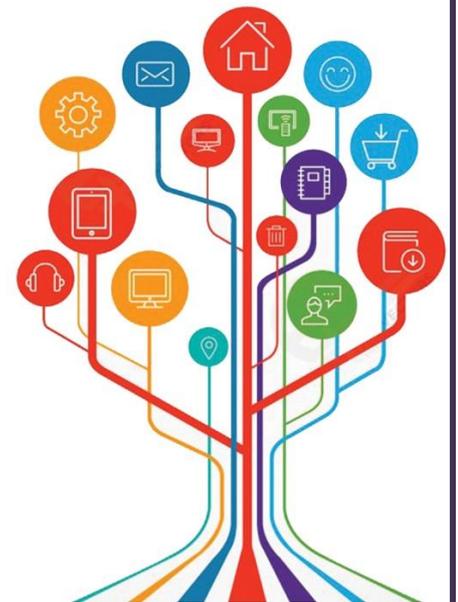

Nothing lasts forever. Not even the coronavirus.

Stay Home!!!

Stay Safe!!!

Efforts for students

India is not novel to online education. Numerous private and government colleges in the country had been conducting online curriculums. To make sure that learning never stops, teachers are preparing lessons using distance learning tools, and students are learning new teaching systems at home. Many colleges that have used online platforms in the past have made a smooth transition post-COVID-19.

Online learning has a lot of promises and even though it has been thrust into the spotlight under unfortunate surroundings, it is time that universities and educational institutions utilize various tools efficiently.

IMRD started online classes for students to carry out teaching and learning process during the lockdown. Faculty members are working from home and constantly helping students by sending content, worksheets, videos and solved questions using cisco webex tool, zoom meeting app and other online platforms. Class-wise whatsapp groups are made where students can get their assignments and put queries if any. The work done by students is also being assessed. To make teaching and learning more convenient, faculty members are available to clear doubts.

During the lockdown, IMRD has taught online theory lectures, online practical, internal practical examinations, and pre-external theory examinations etc., using cisco webex tool and other online tools.

Apart from academics, institute has been sharing technical videos, personality development videos, stress management videos, social responsibilities videos, motivational videos etc., with students to keep them stress free and confident.

During this period, parent teachers also have taken care of students about COVID-19. They kept communication with students through frequent phone calls, whatsapp, emails, messages etc.

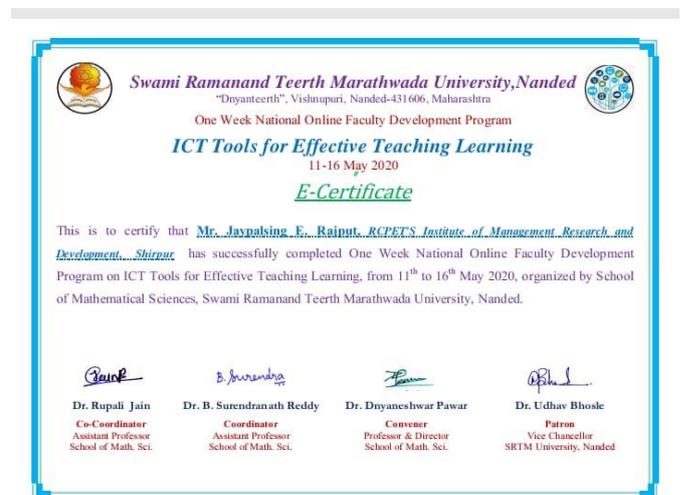

Faculties Achievements

Getting ready to go to the office every morning, scrambling for the car keys, booking an Ola or Uber or rushing to catch the metro seems like a dream currently. Everything reformed almost overnight with the call for a complete lockdown because of COVID-19 pandemic. Life was thrown out of gear and social distancing come to be the new norm.

Indians and people across the world are now getting used to catching up with associates and relatives over video calls, standing a few feet apart from each other when at the grocery stores or even conversing with their neighbors. The major change for many has been the idea of working from home. Nearly the whole workforce of the country is doing that now. Never has the world seen an exercise of this magnitude.

During lockdown period, IMRD faculty members are working from their homes. Along with academic work completion, curricular, co-curricular activities conduction, faculty members are also focusing on their professional development. They are attending various faculty development programs, webinars and conferences. They are also joining various online certification courses. While working from home, many faculty members have published their research papers as well.

They are also getting certificates of various quizzes, certificates of different technologies, certificates of opportunities and challenges for education, certificates of diverse campaigns etc.
